Frank May: A Troubled Beginning:

Born in 1943, Frank May spent his formative years in a dysfunctional and poverty-stricken household. Abandoned by his father at a young age, he grew up in an environment marked by physical abuse and emotional neglect. May's troubled upbringing laid the foundation for his future path of violence.

The First Kill:

In 1977, at the age of 34, May committed his first known murder. He lured a young woman named Elaine Graham into his car and strangled her in a secluded parking lot. Graham's disappearance sent shockwaves through her small town, but the case remained unsolved for years.

A Pattern Emerges:

A Break in the Case:

In 1987, a pivotal breakthrough occurred. A witness came forward with information that placed May at the scene of a murder. With this crucial evidence, police finally obtained a warrant to search May's trailer. Inside, they discovered a chilling collection of Polaroid photographs depicting his victims.

Arrest and Trial:

Armed with irrefutable proof, authorities arrested Frank May on July 29, 1987. His trial was a media sensation, and the nation watched in horror as the extent of his crimes was revealed. May was found guilty of six murders and sentenced to death.
