Jaxon-Bear's journey begins in the boreal forest of northern Ontario. Here, he meets a group of First Nations elders who share their stories of the land and its people. He also learns about the traditional ways of life that have been practiced in this region for centuries.

From the boreal forest, Jaxon-Bear travels to the Canadian Shield's rocky shores of Georgian Bay. Here, he kayaks among the towering granite cliffs and explores the many islands that dot the bay. He also learns about the region's rich maritime history, dating back to the days of the fur trade.

Continuing his journey westward, Jaxon-Bear travels to the rugged wilderness of Algonquin Park. Here, he hikes through dense forests, paddles across pristine lakes, and encounters a variety of wildlife. He also learns about the park's rich natural history and its importance to First Nations communities.

Jaxon-Bear's journey ends in the remote wilderness of northern Manitoba. Here, he visits the Churchill Wildlife Management Area, home to a vast population of polar bears. He also learns about the challenges facing polar bears and other Arctic wildlife due to climate change.
