Early Life and Education

Miri Shefer Mossensohn was born on May 18, 1933, in the city of Hadera, Israel. From a young age, she exhibited a compassionate spirit and a desire to make a meaningful contribution to the world. Driven by her passion for helping others, she enrolled in nursing school at the Hadassah School of Nursing in Jerusalem, where she excelled in her studies.

Medical Missions to Lebanon

In 1968, Miri's path took a significant turn when she joined the medical team of the Israeli Red Cross. Eager to make a difference beyond her country's borders, she embarked on her first mission to Lebanon, a country torn by civil war and humanitarian crisis.

Miri's arrival in Lebanon marked the beginning of an extraordinary chapter in her life. Undeterred by the dangers and hardships she faced, she tirelessly provided medical care to those in desperate need, regardless of their ethnicity, religion, or political affiliation. She worked tirelessly in refugee camps, treating the wounded, comforting the sick, and bringing hope to the hopeless.

Selfless Sacrifice and Unwavering Courage

Miri's unwavering commitment to humanitarianism extended far beyond her medical duties. She actively defended the rights of civilians and relentlessly fought against discrimination and violence. Her courage became legendary as she fearlessly confronted armed militias and intervened in dangerous situations to protect the innocent.

On August 11, 1976, Miri's life took a tragic turn. While attending to a wounded Palestinian child in the refugee camp of Tal Zaatar, she was caught in a fierce crossfire. Despite the imminent danger, she refused to abandon her patient, shielding the child with her own body. In a selfless act of compassion, Miri was fatally wounded and became known as the "Martyr of the Red Cross."

International Recognition and Legacy

Miri's sacrifice resonated deeply not only in Lebanon but also throughout the international community. Her unwavering dedication to humanitarianism and the ultimate price she paid for her beliefs earned her global recognition and admiration. Numerous tributes and memorials were established in her honor, including a monument in the grounds of the International Red Cross in Geneva.

Miri Shefer Mossensohn's legacy extends far beyond her tragic end. Her story continues to inspire countless individuals and organizations to embrace the values of compassion, empathy, and service to humanity. Her life serves as a reminder that even in the darkest of times, the power of one person to make a difference is immeasurable.

Miri Shefer Mossensohn's life and sacrifice are a testament to the transformative power of humanitarianism. As the Martyr of Lebanon, she epitomizes the selfless spirit and unwavering courage that define those who dedicate their lives to the well-being of others. Her story is not just a tale of tragedy but a beacon of hope and inspiration, reminding us that even in the face of adversity, the human spirit can triumph through acts of compassion and love.
