In her latest collection of poems, Toad Life, Connie Kreitler invites readers to embark on a lyrical journey through the natural world, from the smallest toad to the vast expanse of the night sky. With keen observation and a deep love for the environment, Kreitler captures the beauty and fragility of the natural world, reminding us of our interconnectedness with all living things.

A Celebration of the Natural World

Kreitler's poems are a celebration of the natural world in all its wonder and diversity. She writes about the intricate beauty of wildflowers, the playful antics of squirrels, and the majestic flight of birds. In her poem "Ode to a Toad," she captures the humble beauty of this often-overlooked creature:

“In the twilight's embrace, where shadows dance, A creature stirs, a toad in a trance. Its warty skin, a tapestry of brown, A camouflage amidst the fallen leaves on the ground.”

Kreitler's poems are not only about the beauty of nature, but also about its fragility. In "Elegy for a Lost Forest," she laments the destruction of a beloved woodland, a reminder of the importance of conservation.

“Gone are the towering trees, their branches bare, Where once the wind whispered secrets in the air. Now only stumps remain, a mournful sight, A testament to our greed and blight.”

Our Interconnectedness with Nature

Throughout Toad Life, Kreitler emphasizes our interconnectedness with the natural world. She shows us how the actions of humans can have a profound impact on the environment, and how the health of the environment is essential for our own well-being.

In her poem "The River," she writes:

“Oh, river, flowing ever onward, Your waters carry secrets from afar. You quench our thirst, you nourish our land, Yet we pollute your banks with careless hand.”

Kreitler's poems are a call to action, urging us to protect and preserve the natural world for generations to come.
